Call for Submissions

The Nonproliferation Review, the double-blind, peer-reviewed journal of the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies at the Middlebury Institute for International Studies at Monterey, is accepting submissions for publication.

The Review is concerned with the causes, consequences, control, and prevention of the spread of weapons of mass destruction (WMD): nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons. We are also interested in exploring the emergence and deployment of newer weapon systems, insofar as they affect international and regional security, policy making, and WMD posture.

To advance this goal, the Doreen and Jim McElvany Nonproliferation Challenge will recognize exceptional scholarly research, innovative ideas, and policy proposals published in Volume 26 (2019) of the Nonproliferation Review. The Challenge will award a grand prize of $5,000, a $3,000 runner’s-up prize, and a $1,000 honorable mention prize.

We welcome manuscripts in four categories: articles (theoretical analyses and case studies); reports (discussions of new developments and emerging issues); viewpoints (policy proposals and critiques and innovative opinion pieces); and book reviews. Articles should not exceed 10,000 words; viewpoints should not exceed 7,500 words; and book reviews should not exceed 4,000 words. All submissions must contribute new ideas to the field and must adhere to our style guide, which is based on the Chicago Manual of Style (sixteenth edition).

Articles will be accepted for consideration on a rolling basis.

For more information on rules, eligibility, and guidelines, please visit our website at www.nonproliferationreview.org or contact Managing Editor Rhianna Tyson Kreger at rkreger@middlebury.edu.